

Being an Eduqas Media Appointee

Why should you become a Media Studies appointee?

We asked some of our most experienced appointees about the benefits of being a Media Studies appointee.

This is what they had to say.

GCSE examining and moderation is one of the best, most satisfying and important things I've done during my teaching career so far. Having worked as an examiner for over ten years, the CPD I've gained is invaluable and has given me an irreplaceable understanding of the examination process, how mark schemes are applied and extended my subject knowledge.

Lizzie, GCSE Component 2 Team Leader and GCSE Component 3 moderator:

All agreed: it's brilliant CPD

Examining and moderating have supported my teaching and understanding the expectations of the mark schemes. It has made me much more confident in applying the mark schemes to my own marking.

Natalie, Team Leader for GCSE Component 3 and A Level Component 2

It's by far the best CPD you can do and has made me a far better teacher than I'd ever be without having examined.

Brittany, Team Leader for A Level Component 1

Being a moderator and examiner with Eduqas is the most useful thing you could do if you want to improve your classroom teaching as a Media Studies teacher.

Rosie, Assistant Principal Moderator for GCSE Component 3

My knowledge of the specification increased significantly and this confidence fed down to my department and students. Our assessments in school are more informed and, from looking at the data, I can see it is more accurate.
It's the best CPD.

Sophie, Assistant Principal for GCSE Component 1

Examining offers me an insight into how to approach teaching a paper that I wouldn't otherwise get.

*Julian,
Team Leader for A Level
Component 2*

The experience of examining gave me an insight into both what makes a good candidate's performance excel, and common pitfalls and mistakes that can trip a competent learner up: what to aim for and what to avoid doing. At conference, the Principal Examiner and the Subject Officer explain their thinking and their application of the specification, so it familiarised me with the rationale behind the exam questions and their assessment objectives.

Carolyn, Assistant Principal for A Level Component 2

You will gain so much insight into the exam process that will benefit your own teaching and will benefit your students.

*Gareth
Team Leader for GCSE Component 2*

The training is supportive and detailed, providing a real insight into what makes a successful student response.

*Heather
Team Leader for A Level Component 1*

It gives invaluable insight into the assessment process

...and there are lots of other benefits

My examining money always pays for our family holiday!

Jo

Team Leader for GCSE Component 1

Working alongside colleagues who share ideas and feedback has been incredibly helpful.

Joe

Team Leader for GCSE Component 1

I teach full time and find the workload manageable and worthwhile.

Emma

Team Leader for GCSE Component 3

The team is friendly and supportive and if you are anxious about any aspect of the job, there is always someone who has the answer.

Karen

Team Leader for GCSE Component 1

There is an opportunity to meet other teachers across the country and feel like part of something greater than your own centre.

Karen

Team Leader for A Level Component 1

It was ultimately highly beneficial to my career development.

Richard

Team Leader for A Level Component 2

I look forward to it every year.

- Sheree, Team Leader for A Level Component 3
